$2,500 Archival Research Award

The purpose of the Nursing Archives Research Award is to support historical research about nursing and health care. The award is limited to researchers who will use the Howard Gotlieb Archival Research Center (HGARC) Nursing Archives at Boston University as a source for primary research.

Eligibility includes students, faculty, and independent researchers from all disciplines, based on evidence of preparation and/or productivity in historical research related to nursing and health care. Successful grantee will receive $2,500. This award is payable to the individual applicant and is taxable income. The purpose of the award is to support travel, photocopy, digitization, and other expenses related to using the nursing archives in Boston University's Special Collections.

Applicants should submit a full research proposal of no more than 500-600 words, exclusive of title page and references, along with a current CV. The proposal should include the following:

- Abstract
- Project description indicating the scope of the historical research
- Boston University Nursing Archives collection(s) to be used
- Narrative for existing scholarship and how the research will advance scholarship in the history of nursing and health care
- Methodology and timeline, and
- Intended product and plan for dissemination

Evaluation of the proposal will consider the clarity and feasibility of the project. Recipients of the research award are expected to submit a summary of their work, a head shot and brief biography for the Nursing Archives Associates Newsletter and HGARC blog.
